Dissociation and Wholeness in Patrick White's Fiction

Dissociation happens when we are emotionally and or physically overwhelmed and can no longer remain consciously present. It is this side of Patrick White, argues Laurence Steven, that is the source of his genuine power as a novelist. The novels from The Aunt's Story to Memoirs of Many in One are considered in terms of a number of overlapping contexts: White's ambivalence about sexuality, nationality and modernity; his evolving sense of the possibilities of the novel as a form; and the continuing presence of the themes, experiments and influences of the 1930s shaping his mature fiction.
