You were at one sort of bowls as I was at another. In faith, good counsel, Frank: what say'st thou to it? By this, I think, the letter is delivered, And 'twill be shortly time that I step in, And woo their favours for my sister's fortune: And yet I need not; she may do as well, But yet not better, as the case doth stand Between our mothers; it may make them friends; Nay, I would swear that she would do as well, Were she a stranger to one quality; But they are so acquainted, they'll ne'er part.

Do ye deliver this as your deed? Stay, Frank, this pitch of frenzy will defile thee; Meddle not with it: thy unreprovèd valour Should be high-minded; couch it not so low. Well, wife, you know it is no honest part To entertain such guests with jests and wrongs: What will the neighbouring country vulgar say, When as they hear that you fell out at dinner? I would not have thee Check thy good fortune by this cos'ning choice: O, do not thrall thy happy liberty In such a bondage! Come, come, a couple of whoremasters I found ye, and so I leave ye.

But then she'll out again at the back door, And meet with him: but I will search about All these same fields and paths near to my house; They are not far, I am sure, if I make haste. O Lord, it is as dark as pitch! How well't has made the apparel of his wit, And brought it into fashion of an honour! Label The pleasant history of the two angry women of Abington. If so, she'll be a plague unto her husband, If that he be not patient and discreet, For that I hold the ease of all such trouble.
