It received the 1969 for Best Supporting Actress Cannon and Best Screenplay, and the 1969 for Best-Written American Comedy Written Directly for the Screen. It also turns out that Bob previously had an affair, discovered when Michelle found his mistress's bracelet in their bed; the mistress had also been their babysitter.

Later, Carol gleefully reveals the affair to Ted and Alice as they are leaving a dinner party. During the argument, it is revealed that Michelle is reluctant to have sex, which frustrates Bob. Documentary-filmmaker Bob Sanders and his wife Carol attend a group-therapy session that serves as the backdrop for the film's opening scenes.
