The property is located on the ground floor and first floor of the development. A charter issued by Charles II granted royal burgh status in 1644. The Town House in Kirkcaldy is a Scandinavian influenced building, by architects David Carr and William Howard of Edinburgh who won a design competition.

Only the square western tower of the former church was retained. Following the refurbishment of Kirkcaldy Galleries and the opening of the new Kirkcaldy Leisure Centre, this is another welcome investment to build a vibrant town centre and healthy local economy.

Council Services

Employment is now focused in the service sector, with the largest employer being the MGT call centre.
