1813: The Spring Campaign

With respect to Cracow, if the power of the Three States over it had been absolute and complete—if its rights had not been placed under the implied guarantee of all the Powers, parties to the Treaty of Vienna, there might have been regret at the conduct of the Three Powers; but no right on the part of Europe of protest and remonstrance. The crisis of the battle came when the Fifteenth Corps, composed of impressionable southerners from Mar-selles, who occupied the centre of the line near Morhange, suddenly broke and fled. A country such as France—inhabited by a race so warlike, and at the same time possessing within itself such vast resources—with such wealth, such union, does not depend for its security, its independence, or even its power, upon the question whether its frontier is advanced somewhat nearer to the top of the Alps, or somewhat nearer to the banks of the Rhine.

The news of this fresh attack no sooner readied the Austrian camp, than Coburg, instead of attempting to help himself, again had recourse to Suvarof, who had already drawn nearer to Coburg from Belat. I ask him whether he will deny his protocol, or whether he will have recourse to the archives of his office to prove how all the signatories of the general Treaty of Vienna were appealed to in the case of Belgium? The emperor Joseph, who had anticipated the arrival of his ally in Kherson, travelled to meet her as far as Kaidack, and returned with her. Since Germany industrialised later than Britain, it was able to model its factories after those of Britain, thus making more efficient use of its capital and avoiding legacy methods in its leap to the envelope of technology.
