He wanted everyone to be treated as equals.

アダム・ウラム

His goal to bring the into the industrial age put tremendous pressure on his people. Why did the Russians sign a treaty with Hitler? He was from a family of wealthy landowners and was educated at the military academy in Petersburg, thereafter teaching mathematics at various military academies. But not every one accepted and believed him especially landowners, factory owners and etc.

Ideologies and Illusions

There were different aims in the movement: some wished to educate the narod and spread propaganda, to enlighten the peasants and create the conditions necessary for a later revolution, while others were intent on stirring up revolt immediately. Everyone was treated equal in all facets. The peasant community was egalitarian and homogeneous, but its members had differentiated and many-sided personalities.
