A Brief History of Time Quotes by Stephen Hawking

Recall that our sun resides at the neighborly distance of eight light-minutes.

A Brief History of Time by Stephen Hawking

In other words, Hawking claims that the psychological arrow of time is intertwined with the thermodynamic arrow of time. So general relativity predicts that light should be bent by gravitational fields.

The Big Bang, Black Holes, and the evolution of the Universe

The theory also tells us that nothing can travel faster than light.

A Brief History of Time: From the Big Bang to Black Holes

In this case, the difference in ages would be very small, but it would be much larger if one of the twins went for a long trip in a spaceship at nearly the speed of light. Only Hawking could write this book - simple, to the point and extremely resourceful. The nonexistence of absolute rest therefore meant that one could not give an event an absolute position in space, as Aristotle had believed.
