Curriculum vitae complet

Epicoene; or, the Silent Woman shows a man, Morose, driven by his hatred of noise, and his being beguiled by family who dress up a boy as an allegedly mute woman to be his perfect bride. Instead, Neoptolemus takes pity on the wounded but noble Philoctetes, and near the end of the drama, the two decide to reject the Greek cause at Troy and to hold their own.

. But Racine, reared by relatives after being orphaned at age three, asserted throughout his life an independence from even the most influential institutions and mentors—from all, that is, but one: Louis XIV.

But on her next appearance on stage, her natural inclination re-emerges in force: Seulement je ne peux m'empêcher de penser que je suis une femme, que je pourrais si je le voulais accepter de porter l'enfant que tu m'as fait jusqu'au bout même si je sais que tu ne m'épouserais pas.

Michel Tremblay

Both Nobel Prize winner Harold Pinter and Pulitzer Prize winner Sam Shepard wrote plays that combined realistic elements with absurdist ones.
