Samuel Oldknow

Oldknow also had to sell the Heaton Mersey and Anderton operations.

Peak Forest Canal

The mill at Mellor was never particularly profitable, and Oldknow's debt grew, reaching £206,000 at the time of his death. At his death his factory was mortgaged to the Arkwrights and he played a minor role in its running. Recently, the extensive basin has been reopened, and is now a popular venue for visiting boats.

With a loan from Richard Arkwright he built mills in Stockport and Mellor; Mellor Mill, next to the River Goyt, was the largest cotton spinning mill in the world at the time.

High Peak Railway

The Lower Peak Forest Canal, from Dukinfield Junction to Marple, was one of seven stretches of canal formally designated as remainder waterways that were re-classified by the British Waterways Act of 8 February 1983. In the end, he was left with no option but to leave his entire legacy in the hands of his debt collectors. Margery later in 1770 married John Clayton, a farmer, with whom she had three children: Margery, Samuel and John.

The Samuel Oldknow

It was the decline of Oldknow's finances which led to this being broken off.

The canal is perched halfway up the valley-side with extensive views of, and the Peak District beyond from Marple through, , , Furness Vale and.

Samuel Oldknow These facsimile records relate to the business activities of Samuel Oldknow and to the carrying of limestone, coal and road stone on the Peak Forest Canal to his lime works at Marple. The Upper Peak Forest Canal is on the same level as that of the upper , allowing boats to cruise from or all the way to the top lock at Bosley without having to use a lock.
