It is also recommended for viewers to study his works at a very close range, so they could feel and emphasize with the emotions provoked by these paintings.

Mark Rothko 1903

In college, he pursued a degree in liberal arts, as well as the sciences, in Yale University. During his period of transition to pure abstract painting, he created the so-called multiforms, which would finally evolve into his famous works of the classical period with their rectangular, hazy fields of color.

Mark Rothko

As he consulted the architects of the chapel, he was able to create a solemn and peaceful space for contemplation with his use of immersive colors. Meanwhile, Rothko's marriage had become increasingly troubled, and his poor health and impotence resulting from the aneurysm compounded his feeling of estrangement in the relationship.
